

POLICE PUT ROSS ON RACK AGAIN IN PAGE MYSTERY

Disappeared After Telling First Story, and Authorities Heard He Had Said to His Wife that He Had Not Told Detectives All He Knew.

BOSTON, April 9.—George Ross, the coachman who passed the Page home at Weston on the day Mabel Page was murdered at about the hour of the tragedy and then disappeared from his home for several days, was brought to Headquarters in this city today by State detectives.

Ross had been questioned before, and it was thought that the account he gave of his movements had been satisfactory. Yesterday the detectives heard Ross had told his wife after his examination that he knew more than he had told. This may account for bringing him to Boston today.

There has been considerable speculation about Ross's actions. He disappeared right after the murder and did not communicate with his home. Upon his reappearance his wife said that he had given an account of his movements that was satisfactory to her.

The police are at a standstill in the Mabel Page mystery. There are vague rumors of an important clue discovered in the room where Miss Page was murdered by Chief Shaw, of the State police, but the Chief, who went down to Weston yesterday to take personal charge of the case does not appear to be hopeful that anything will develop from it.

"Do you think you will make an arrest within twenty-four hours?" he was asked today.

"I do not," was his answer. "Perhaps we shall not make an arrest in two weeks and perhaps we shall never make an arrest in this case."

Thus far the case has gone the way of all the other unsolved Massachusetts murder mysteries in which women have figured as the victims. The local police, the State police and the private detectives who have been drawn into the case by the offer of a large reward have run down every apparent clue and all of them have ended against a blank wall.

It is reported that Miss Page's pet dog, which has been missing since the day of the tragedy, has been found dead in the woods, cut to pieces, presumably by the murderer. The disappearance of this dog has done much to make the police believe that the person who killed Miss Page was well known at the Page home, for the dog would not have followed a stranger. The supposition is that the animal followed the murderer from the house, refused to turn back and was killed to destroy the trail.

Chief Shaw says that everybody whose movements on the day of the tragedy were connected in any way with the Page case has proved a complete alibi. Mr. Page, the father, has accounted for his time after leaving his home in the morning to visit a neighboring town until his return in the afternoon, when he found the body of his daughter. Harold Page, the brother, was at work in the Boston offices of the Boston and Albany Railroad. Amy Roberts, the maid, who was taking a day off when the crime was committed, has accounted for every minute of her time, and the men who were seen in the vicinity of the house have all given complete accounts of their movements.

The capture of the murderer of Miss Page must result only from infinite patience in running down the slightest clues. Chief Shaw and his men are deeply chagrined at their failure to bring anything of a tangible nature to light after nine days of labor and are determined that this case shall not be put down with the Borden, Fosberg and other unsolved mysteries if hard work accomplishes results.

There is no connection between the Page mystery and the death of Miss Ethel Coburn at Weston yesterday. Miss Coburn had been ill for six weeks. She did not know Miss Page, and they lived in widely separated parts of the town.

$100,000 WAITING FOR MISSING HEIR UP FOR PARKER

Executors of Charles Miller's Estate Will Advertise for Son George, Who Disappeared Three Years Ago.

At a meeting of the executors of the estate of the late Charles Miller, of Williamsburg, today, it was decided to insert advertisements in all California newspapers informing George Miller, who has been an exile from home for three years, that his father has left him an estate valued at about $100,000. Young Miller has never written to his people since he departed in anger, and it is not known whether he is dead or alive, although occasional reports of his movements indicate that he is located in some little town in the interior of California.

Charles Miller was the senior member of the firm of Miller & Gaus, wholesale dealers in groceries and teas at No. 790 Broadway, near Flushing avenue. The Miller homestead is a fine old mansion at No. 86 Westchester avenue.

George was the only son, a big, handsome fellow, with an aversion to the common work that his father had mapped out for him. It was the ambition of Mr. Miller to have his son succeed in the business.

He had won his fortune by hard work and frugality, and insisted that the boy should learn the business from the shipping room up. Young Miller did not like him to the scheme. He knew that his father had plenty of money and could not see the necessity for him to put on a pair of overalls and juggle boxes of tea and groceries for $12 a week.

Seldom did he appear at the grocery house on time and when he did not feel like working he would not appear at all. He got in with a fast set in Williamsburg and failed to live up to the idea of his parent, who was a believer in the principle that a man should continue his expenditures to the limits of his income.

When George had reached the age of twenty-seven without showing any disposition to get busy in the grocery business, father and son held a stormy session. Mr. Miller informed the young man that if he would not work he could not remain at home. George responded that he had concluded that home was not the pleasant place in the world under the circumstances and expressed a desire to travel.

Mr. Miller gave him a generous check and advised him to get a job in California. He instructed him to register at a certain hotel in San Francisco, where his best work clothes were packed. At the expiration of that time, the father said, he expected that the young man would have a job and be self-supporting.

George bade his mother and sisters goodbye and then they have never heard from him directly. Two years ago they heard that he had been killed in a railroad accident, but shortly after that news reached them that he had married a beautiful young California woman. Then came news that he had separated from her and was prospecting her property in Idaho.

Mr. Miller died last Sunday. It was expected he would cut his son off with a small legacy, but to the surprise of the family it was found that the will left George about $100,000, and instructed the executors to advertise, if possible, bringing him back to Brooklyn, and place him in charge of his business.

BROOKLYN LINES UP FOR PARKER

Kings County Delegates to State Convention to Be Chosen To-Night Will Favor Instructions for the Judge.

It is announced today that the Brooklyn delegates to be elected to-night to the State convention will receive no instructions. This does not mean that Senator McCarren has receded from the opinion that the delegates to St. Louis should be instructed for Parker. The Kings County delegation to the State Convention will hold a caucus to determine its policy at Albany.

More than a week ago, after conferring with a number of the more prominent district leaders, Senator McCarren said the delegates to be elected to-night by the Assembly districts might not be instructed, but that the failure to do so should not be accepted as a retreat from his original position for an instructed delegation to the National Convention.

"We shall have accomplished as much as we intend when the delegates shall have been elected," said Senator McCarren. "At the caucus of the Kings County delegates they will vote in favor of instructing the delegates at St. Louis to vote for Parker. There can be no question that the delegation will be in sympathy with my purpose. In deterring instructions until decided upon at the caucus I feel that the best interests of all will be served."

Will Vote for Parker. It has not yet been decided whether the Brooklyn delegates shall enter caucus in Kings or at Albany just before the convention, but no matter what time or place, it is stated today that the Kings delegation will, with a few exceptions, favor instructions for Judge Parker. These exceptions will occur among those delegates elected from the districts controlled by Doyle, Kehoe and the few others known to have yielded to Tammany influence.

The story given out the other day by Leader Murphy's adviser and spokesman to the effect that fifteen district leaders had promised their support to the Tammany chief for an uninstructed delegation is receiving emphatic denial from the district leaders who were said to have broken away from Senator McCarren.

Dennis Winters, of the Twentieth Assembly District, whose name was mentioned among the anti-McCarrenites, said today:

"I'll pay $1,000 to any person who can produce proof that I have ever expressed my intention of breaking away from McCarren's course, or even that I visited Leader Murphy or any representative of his seeking an opportunity to join any anti-McCarren movement."

Afterward, Leader Doyle would not talk for publication. It is known that he has characterized as "foolish" the Tammany-inspired story that fifteen Brooklyn leaders had broken away from Senator McCarren.

ANTI-RENTERS CANNOT PARADE

Commissioner McAdoo, Fearing Riot, Refuses a Permit for the Big Meeting and the Mayor Upholds Him.

EAST SIDE "JOAN OF ARC" APPEALS TO HIM IN VAIN.

Miss Leibson, Greatly Disappointed, Declares It Is Unfair to Prevent Meeting When Socialists Are Unmolested.

Bertha E. Leibson, the seventeen-year-old east side "Joan of Arc," who is fighting for her compatriots who declare that they are suffering under the recent ungracious advance of about 30 per cent. in rents, appealed to Mayor McAdoo today from the decision of Police Commissioner McAdoo, refusing a permit to "New York Tenants' Rent Protectors" to hold a big parade and mass-meeting in Seward Park next Monday night.

Secretary O'Brien explained to Miss Leibson that Commissioner McAdoo's decision was final and that the Mayor could not give the desired permission. "We are a law-abiding people and I don't see why we should be refused," she exclaimed. "We are a law-abiding people and I don't see why we should be refused."

"The Commissioner told me when I asked him for the permit that he feared there would be riots at the meeting if he allowed us to have one, and all I could say to him would not make him think differently. There would be absolutely no danger at all from any of us. We are advocating peaceful, yet forcible methods, and we certainly ought to have the privilege of holding our parade and mass-meeting. Mr. McAdoo said he could not provide us with 'protectors.' Why, we wouldn't need any. Our people would do no harm, and I do not anticipate that our enemies would molest us. It seems like unjust discrimination."

Miss Leibson, who is treasurer of the "Protectors," was accompanied by Morris Richman, the secretary. The Mayor was too busy to receive them personally, but Secretary John O'Brien explained to them that the Mayor would not go over the Police Commissioner's head.

Miss Leibson and Mr. Richman were very much cast down at the failure of their mission. They said that the "Protectors" now numbered more than 500, with the membership increasing constantly.

"The people of the East Side," added Miss Leibson, "are very much interested in this matter, and are determined to force things to an issue. If they don't it will mean more misery and suffering than ever, just because the 'renters' are looking for every dollar they can squeeze out of us, whether it is right or just or not."

"Our plans are maturing rapidly, and I hoped by the parade and mass-meeting to bring more people into the 'Protectors.' It's a case of 'We must all work together or we will all be evicted separately.'"

Rents in Rents Explained. In speaking of east side conditions today, A. Salsman, one of the few tenement-house owners who acts as his own agent, said that many false impressions were abroad in regard to the true condition of affairs. He owns the tenement at No. 105 Livingston street and those Nos. 99 and 101 East street, where he lives.

"All this increase in rents is due solely to the speculative fever in east side property," he said. "Agents will secure the leaseholds of a few tenements for a lump sum for a term of years, then taking from the owners the rent for the balance of the term. Our people would do no harm, and I do not anticipate that our enemies would molest us. It seems like unjust discrimination."

"If the owner or 'renter' has a chance to sell the greater the rent he advances, the greater the price for the property. That's all there is to it. 'Many persons have given us a reason for their moving the fact that their rent had been increased beyond the living point. In many cases this is not the truth.'"

For instance, in the Evening World of Monday it was reported that the delinquent firm of Friedman & Klein had been forced from their store in my building, at No. 105 Livingston street, because the rent was increased from $25 to $40 a month. It was not true. Their rent was always $35 a month, and it was not increased at all. They were dispossessed simply because they refused to pay rent any more, alleging "The rents of the East Side."

"The rents of the East Side" have not been changed in the past twelve years. That is the difference between owning and leasing."

PERILOUS "L" RIDE A POINT OF GUN

day, Goodman had a revolver and made threats against him. He managed to dismiss Goodman, and although he heard of him again he did not actually encounter him a second time until today.

Col. Greene left the Ansonia and at the corner of Seventy-second street met Goodman, who coolly presented his small-sized arsenal at the millionaire's head. Col. Greene was considerably startled, but managed to retain his presence of mind.

"See here, Goodman," he said. "You put those things away and come downtown and talk this over with me. You will be recompensed if your claims are all right. No one wants to swindle you."

Goodman hesitated a moment and then put his weapons in his pocket. He warned Col. Greene, however, that he had his eye on him and would surely kill him if he tried any tricks. He then raised his coat and showed that he had the magazine gun pointed directly at Col. Greene's abdomen. He kept it in that position all the way downtown.

Col. Greene says that he talked incessantly and managed to jolly Goodman into quite decent behavior.

When they walked from the elevated station to Col. Greene's office the latter managed to get a word to one of his clerks, and the clerk went to the Old Slip station, returning in a few minutes with Policemen Allen and Hauser.

TAKEN TO POLICE COURT.

Goodman submitted to arrest quietly, but announced that Col. Greene wouldn't get another chance to fool him like that. His weapons were seized and he was taken to the Old Slip station. Later he was taken to the Police Court, where Col. Greene appeared against him.

A simple charge of assault was made against Goodman and bail was fixed at $1,500. This angered Col. Greene, who said to Magistrate Cornell: "That won't do at all. The man who put him up to this job can get bail for him to any amount. He can give a million dollars in bail if he wants to."

The Magistrate then said it was a simple case of assault, so to make it felonious assault Secretary George S. Robbins, of the Greene Company, called as a witness. Goodman held a revolver under his coat pointed at Col. Greene. Bail was then fixed at $5,000, which Goodman did not furnish. So he was taken to the Tombs. He sent several messages out for bondsmen and expects to be released in a few hours.

After Goodman had been led away Col. Greene, who was very pale and apparently much excited, told the story of his offering Goodman his 5,000 shares in the Yaqui Copper Company three weeks ago and of his refusal to accept them if he had to give a receipt. He then added:

"This man has been employed by Gates and his associates in a mine which they own at Minera Britas, State of Sonora, Mexico. I do not wish to talk any more about the motive of the man in attacking me. I have said too much already, perhaps."

WAS SWINDLED, PRISONER SAID.

Goodman was not inclined to talk at all when spoken to by an Evening World reporter. He laughed when asked whether he was insane, and then, becoming very serious again, said:

"It's just this: I'm a Western man in the East, and I mean to go slow. When Col. Greene heard what Goodman had said, he said: 'I'll tell just this much more. Goodman has already 100,000 shares of the Yaqui stock turned over to him, and he has spent it in dissipation. He hasn't been swindled by any one. His claim for 5,000 shares is all right. I believe, but he knows how he can get these.'"

Sensational developments are expected on Monday afternoon, when Goodman's case will come up for investigation.

The officers of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company are as follows: William C. Greene, President; George S. Robbins, Secretary; Edward B. Tuttle, Treasurer; Directors, Myron M. Parker, Mark L. Sperry, Edward C. Rice, Alfred Romers, Edward B. Tuttle, Bernard M. Baruch, S. B. Black, J. B. Shaw, John W. Gates, Frank H. Ray, Thomas H. Thompson, Elmer Berolzheimer, Henry F. Blount, Anson W. Burnard, William C. Greene, L. C. Ward, Henry Oleschberger, Jacob Weidmann, Charles Adelt, H. E. Huntington and Edwin Hawley.

GOODMAN DENIES THREATS TO SHOOT.

H. D. Luce, of the firm of Luce & Davis, of No. 29 Liberty street, counsel for Goodman, dictated the following statement for his client this afternoon after conferring with him in the Tombs:

"Mr. Goodman, under the advice of his counsel, declines to make any other statement than that which arose over the adjustment of an amount that Mr. Goodman claims that Mr. Greene owed him in settlement for certain mining interests in Mexico."

"Mr. Goodman further adds that the statement made by Mr. Greene in court as to his having a pistol in West Seventy-second street and the statements about the threats to shoot are false. Mr. Goodman declines to make any further statement in the matter."

The Yaqui Copper Company was originally a Mexican corporation, being organized about four years ago under a Mexican charter, and had holdings in the Sonora Valley in Mexico. The corporation was re-organized two years ago last month under a West Virginia charter. It is understood that Mr. Greene was associated with Goodman in the original holdings. At the Yaqui Copper Company's office it was said that the trouble is simply a personal deal between the two men, affecting former holdings, and has nothing to do with the company as now constituted.

EX-QUEEN ISABELLA DEAD IN PARIS

Grandmother of Alfonso, the Young King of Spain, Passes Away After an Illness of Several Days.

PARIS, April 8.—Isabella, ex-Queen of Spain, died here today, after an illness of several days.

It became apparent yesterday that the ex-Queen's condition was critical. Her advanced age was against her recovery, and her physicians told her that she had only a few hours to live. The Queen had been afflicted with the grippe for two months, which gradually affected her health. She became unconscious, and death's approach was apparent at 7 o'clock this morning.

The three infants and Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, husband of the Infanta Marie, were summoned to the bedside, but the dying Queen did not recognize them.

The Papal Nuncio was summoned to administer the last sacraments, but, owing to his absence from Paris at the last rites of the Church were administered by the Vicar of the Church of St. Pierre. The Queen's death followed shortly afterward.

Prince Ferdinand immediately telegraphed the news to the king of Spain, to Foreign Minister Delcasse and to all the European sovereigns.

At Delcasse's residence the day and was admitted to the death chamber, and President Loubet sent an officer of his household to present his condolences.

It is understood that King Alfonso was not at home at the time of the funeral, as he did not come for the funeral of his grandfather, King Francis, who died in April, 1902.

The deceased Queen had been one of the conspicuous figures of Paris since she left Spain. After her abdication, in 1870, she continued to live with quietly magnificence in Paris, largely to charitable and religious work.

Queen Isabella, who was the eldest daughter of Ferdinand VII. of Spain, was born in Madrid Oct. 10, 1830. In 1858 she married Prince Francis, Duke of Calabry, who died at Epimay, France, April 17, 1902.

Queen Isabella and her husband were expelled from Spain as a result of the revolution of 1868. She formally abdicated the throne in Paris on June 16, 1870, in favor of her son, the late King Alfonso XII. Father of the present King Alfonso XIII. She died at Epimay, France, April 17, 1902.

HORSE GOES THROUGH BIG OFFICE WINDOW

Animal Falls on the Slippery Asphalt and Slides Into the Office of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company.

Among the visitors at the office of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, at Liberty and William streets, this afternoon was a large horse. The horse entered the office by way of the plate-glass window, an extremely painful method of entrance and one that is likely to cost the unwilling visitor his life.

John Daly was driving the animal down Liberty street to a truck belonging to the Hawley Box Company, at No. 42 Gold street. At the William street corner the horse fell on the slippery asphalt, sliding diagonally across the street, clearing the sidewalk and crashing through the 10x10 plate-glass window of the insurance office.

The foreman's head and shoulders of the unfortunate animal entered the office, coincident with the departure of a dozen clerks through a rear door. Half an hour was consumed in dragging the animal to the street and although he was able to walk to the stable in Gold street, it is feared that he will have to be destroyed.
